14. [redacted] LIAISON Mr. Lewis Hunter, GAO, called again concerning the study GAO is doing on personnel overseas. I told him our people did not feel that they could talk about our staffing process without getting into substance. He asked if we could talk with his people so they could at least let us see what their study consists of. I told him I would pass his message on.

15. [redacted] LIAISON Dorothy Fosdick, Senate Government Operations Committee, called and asked about the footnote to the House Select Committee report which mentioned Senator Henry M. Jackson (D., Wash.). I told her basically what it said. I also told her we could find no record of the 24 February 1973 memo being transmitted to the House Select Committee. Ms. Fosdick asked if we would send her a copy of the footnote right away and I agreed to do so. She said the Senator should deny everything in the memo since he is not quoted correctly. She said it was obvious that there never should have been a memo on this kind of thing in the first place. I told her we had to keep records of things like this and that we were "damned if we do, and damned if we don't."

I later called Ms. Fosdick and underscored the fact that even though the footnote was not stamped with a classification, it should be handled as classified. She said she understood and would contro.. it.

20. [REDACTED] BRIEFING Accompanied [REDACTED] OCI, to a briefing to update Senator Dick Clark (D., Iowa) on the [REDACTED] Bruce Van Voorst and Maryann Albertson, of the Senator's staff, sat in. As the Senator was leaving, he acknowledged that Mr. Colby would not appear before the Subcommittee on African Affairs, Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and in response to his query whether someone else could appear in his place, I said not because we just could not testify on the questions which had been put to us in open session, an answer the Senator seemed to appear to understand. In the ensuing discussion with the staffers, I made it clear that I thought it was wrong to ask our analyst's opinion on U.S. foreign policy matters, that such questions should be addressed to policymakers, and in my opinion, this was an abuse of our function and the analysis we provide.

[REDACTED] LIAISON Pursuant to her conversation with Mr. Cary, delivered to Dorothy Fosdick, Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations, Senate Government Operations Committee staff, a 23 February 1973 memorandum which had been cited in the House Select Committee Report. She said that Senator Henry Jackson (D., Wash.) would want to have any other similar memoranda or documents which may be misused as this one was. I said we would check.
